Side 2: Hamlet – Too too solid flesh

| Takes up the banner of his | HAMLET | O, that this too too solid flesh would melt |
|----------------------------|--------|--|
| father from the ground, | | Thaw and resolve itself into a dew! |
| where it's been carelessly | | Or that the Everlasting had not fix'd |
| discarded. | | His canon 'gainst self-slaughter! O God! God! |
| | | How weary, stale, flat and unprofitable, |
| | | Seem to me all the uses of this world! |
| | | Fie on't! ah fie! 'tis an unweeded garden, |
| | | That grows to seed; things rank and gross in nature |
| | | Possess it merely. That it should come to this! |
| | | But two months dead: nay, not so much, not two: |
| | | (compares the banner in his hands to the one on the wall) So |
| | | excellent a king; that was, to this, |
| | | Hyperion to a satyr; so loving to my mother |
| | | That he might not beteem the winds of heaven |
| | | Visit her face too roughly. Heaven and earth! |
| | | Must I remember? why, she would hang on him, |
| | | As if increase of appetite had grown |
| | | By what it fed on: and yet, within a month |
| | | Let me not think on'tFrailty, thy name is woman! |
| | | A little month, or ere those shoes were old |
| | | With which she follow'd my poor father's body, |
| | | Like Niobe, all tears:why she, even she |
| | | O, God! a beast, that wants discourse of reason, |
| | | Would have mourn'd longermarried with my uncle, |
| | | My father's brother, but no more like my father |
| | | Than I to Hercules: within a month: |
| | | Ere yet the salt of most unrighteous tears |
| | | Had left the flushing in her galled eyes, |
| | | She married. O, most wicked speed, to post |
| | | With such dexterity to incestuous sheets! |
| | | It is not nor it cannot come to good: |
| | | But break, my heart; for I must hold my tongue. |
